

Roadmap to Spiritual Awakening. . .

The Descent into Density

Questions:

- Q1. The newly minted chakras helped, but why could the soul not take its place within the physical body?
- Q2. What advantage did Earth's volunteer light-workers lose once the process of densification got underway?
- Q3. What helped Earth's volunteer light-workers move into physical density without losing their connection to their bodies of light.
- Q4. When the time came to move fully onto the physical plane, what problems did physical density create for Earth's volunteer light-workers?
- Q5. What is the Sanskrit term to describe the mind's illusions on the physical plane?
- Q6. In the initial experiments to invoke the soul's spirit-light into the human body during young adulthood, what happened?
- Q7. Does the creation of the chakra power centres predate the full descent into matter.
- Q8. What happened to the chakras following the full descent into matter?
- Q9. To solve the problem of having too much higher dimensional and soul light force the physical body back into the potentials of the fourth dimensions, what innovation was used?
- Q10. What was the second advantage of using the Base Chakra, as compared to the larger body as-a-whole, to accommodate the spirit light of the soul.

Answers:

- A1. Physical density was too great.

A2. They lost the advantage of enlightened vision from the perspective of the heavens.

A3. Earth's volunteer light-workers used the tools of light such as crystals, energy robes, wands, energy-enhancing structures, copper energy beds, copper pyramids, and geographical light-stations. The tools compensated for some of the differences in vibration, thus allowing the volunteers to be partially physical, and yet, still connected with their light-bodies.

A4. The problems included: separation from their truth in the higher dimensions, loss of memory of the higher-self and the lighted universe, the mind became veiled in the illusions of the physical plane, light bodies could not tolerate the extreme density of the third dimension, profound separation from the higher-self and the enlightened universe. In effect, they were marooned in ignorance on Earth.

A5. Maya

A6. The dramatic increase in the physical body's vibration rate created overwhelming instability. The physical body popped out of the third dimension to return to a state of potential in the fourth and higher dimensions.

A7. Yes

A8. Full descent into matter immersed the chakras in the very slow vibrations of the physical plane and overwhelmed their ability to carry light. The chakras were able to manifest within the physical body, but were unable to function in the environment of Earth's density. They quickly fell into a state of dormancy.

A9. Instead, the light-workers decided to raise the vibration of the physical body, but not the entire body. Focus shifted to making the Base Chakra compatible with the soul with the hope that stability could be maintained.

A10. The process was scaled down. Less space and less light meant a less overwhelming and more manageable process.
